White standing on the bank of the Red River near the fall ledge on the road from here to Sherman, last Sunday afternoon John R. Hooper, aged twenty, fell into the river and was drowned. It was an hour before the body was recovered and a pulmotor tailed to bring him around. Deceased was the father of K. K. Hooper, the editor of the Sherman Democrat.

There was then a program prepared jointly by the Normal and College students, including a play by the Normal entitled "The Crown of Peace."

After the program there was a big barbecue to which all are invited. There will be about a ton and a half of fine barbecued beef which should be enough to go around.

At 2:30 in the afternoon there was a football game between the Normal team and the fast team of the Southwest Military Academy of Dallas.

A $6.50 drop on the COTTON MARKET COMES

New Orleans, Nov. 19.—A decline of $6.50 a bale on the weakest month was the response in the cotton market last Wednesday to heavier selling to the first of November than expected.

The report by the census bureau of 6,646,136 bales produced compared with the average expectations of about 6,300,000 bales, but most of the selling was due to the fact that ginning to the first of November was so far above the total crop estimated some time ago by the department of agriculture, whose figures were 6,537,000 bales.

The market slumped 415 to 131 points under Tuesday's close to 16.62 cents for December.

PLAN TO ERrect SUNDAY SCHOOL BUILDING SOON

The official board of the Christian church is preparing plans for the erection of a three-room structure on the property in front of the church which is owned by Holman Bros. It will be used for the men's class and the two women classes. The Sunday school has outgrown the present building, and the board has decided to erect this temporary structure until conditions will warrant the remodeling of the present church.

JACK THE KISSER

Jack The Kisser arrived at Healdton Armistice day and is now out on bond pending hearing on assault charge.

The man attended the football game at Healdton park between the Healdton and Bryan elevens.

He entered that section of the stadium occupied by girl cheerleaders of the local team and in rapid succession seized, turned and kissed three of the young women. An angry crowd of fans seized him and ended the night's strenuous work on the part of officers presented a serious looking for what he carried a torch brand. Healdton Dispatch, Okla.

DROWNED IN RED RIVER

White standing on the bank of the Red River near the fall ledge on the road from here to Sherman, last Sunday afternoon John R. Hooper, aged twenty, fell into the river and was drowned. It was an hour before the body was recovered and a pulmotor failed to bring him around. Deceased was the father of K. K. Hooper, the editor of the Sherman Democrat.

A proud home brewer took a sample of his beer to Dr. J. M. Doran, chief prohibition chemist in Washington, D. C. "It must be at least 10 per cent," said he, "because it leaves you with an awful head in the morning." Dr. Doran took the home brew into the laboratory, tested it and found that it was not properly made and contained no alcohol at all. But it was full of preservatives. This is a poison frequently found in spoiled food and is almost sure death.

Up in Michigan a farmer's bull drugged some corn juice found at the base of a tree. The result was the biggest prize the community has seen since prohibition set in. The bull went on what used to be called a high-jinksome. He took charge of the town and wherever he appeared the populace climbed trees. Finally he went to sleep in the fence corner and deputy sheriffs lassoed him. But it can be said in explanation of the bull that he didn't drink the poison deliberately.
